Up for grabs is a rare matching set of Theranos point-of-care diagnostic “Edison” devices. Billed as the ‘iPod of healthcare’, the Edison is a semi-portable immunochemistry platform capable of performing multiplexed protein assays on a fingerstick sample of human or animal whole blood. According to the manufacturer’s website “Theranos is pioneering the integration of technology with medical therapies and delivery...we’re building a completely new infrastructure to enable our vision of real-time testing, informed decision-making, and individualized care.”

I bought these units recently when I thought I was at risk of succumbing to septic shock. Now that I’ve tested my protein C and realized that I’m safely in the 4ug/mL range, I no longer need a pre-production blood analytic device. My loss is your gain!

$10k for the pair, $6000 apiece, OBO - would also be willing to consider trade for a comparable pre-clinical diagnostic device (i.e. Roche, Becton-Coulter, Abaxis, Biosite, etc.). Comes with a supply of single use cartridges, pelican shipping cases, AC adapter, EU power adapters, and assorted blood collection accessories, leeches, etc.
